

GUIDE TO GRADUATE STUDIES IN FRENCH AND ITALIAN 2016-17

This Guide to Graduate Studies in French and Italian contains essential information concerning the Department's graduate programs. Please study it carefully. It is the student's responsibility to be familiar with the rules and regulations outlined here. Students with questions about the material this guide contains may see either the Graduate Studies Chair (listed below) or the Academic Program Coordinator (APC) (Sonya Afanasyeva, afanasyeva.1) for additional assistance.

It is also the student's responsibility to read and be familiar with the material in the Graduate School Handbook issued by the Graduate School (students should download a copy from the Graduate School's web page at <http://www.gradsch.ohio-state.edu/graduate-school-handbook1.html>. No paper copies will be issued). References in this document to GSH refer to particular sections of the Graduate School Handbook. These two documents complement one another, so students should have them both handy and refer to them often.

APPLICATION DEADLINES

Students are normally admitted to our Ph.D. programs beginning Autumn semester. The deadlines for application are as follows:

For students who wish to be considered for a Fellowship or Graduate Teaching Associateship:

November 30

Applications received after this date may still be considered for Graduate Teaching Associateships if funding remains, but students are advised to submit their application as early as possible after this deadline if it cannot be met.

Students not requesting funding:

July 1 for international students

August 1 for U.S. students

Applications are evaluated as soon as all required components are received and the file is complete. Since some components, such as transcripts and letters of recommendation, may take time to be sent out after requested, students should plan well ahead of deadlines.

THE PH.D. PROGRAMS IN FRENCH AND ITALIAN

The Ph.D. programs in French and Italian are “direct-admit” programs, meaning students with either a Bachelors or a Masters degree may apply to be directly admitted into the Ph.D. program of their choice. We offer no terminal Masters programs, but students who enter without an MA and who fulfill all the requirements of the first two years of their PhD program will earn an MA degree on their way to the doctorate. (revised 8/14)

Admission Requirements

1. Admission of students to the Ph.D. program in French or Italian is the dual responsibility of the Graduate School and the Departmental Graduate Studies Committee in accordance with the rules of the Graduate School. Applicants must apply online at the Graduate Admissions website: <http://gradadmissions.osu.edu/gri.asp> (GSH, Section II).
2. The Graduate Record Examination (GRE) is required of all applicants who are graduates of North American institutions and of international applicants whose Grade Point Average from all previous higher-education institutions, when converted to the American 4 point scale by the Graduate School, is lower than 3.0. Students should strive to do as well as possible on all parts of the examination, since strength of GRE scores is considered an important factor for admission.
3. The Test of English as a Foreign Language (with a minimum score of 550 on the paper test, 213 on the computer-based test, or 79 on the Internet-based test) or the Michigan Test of English Language Proficiency (with a minimum score of 82) is required of all applicants from countries where the first language is not English, unless a degree was earned in an English-speaking institution.
4. Regardless of their TOEFL score, new international graduate students for whom English is not the first language must certify their proficiency in spoken English before assuming GTA duties involving direct student contact. They may become certified by scoring acceptably on the Test of Spoken English (TSE) (taken before coming to OSU) or the SPEAK test or, in some cases, by passing the mock-teaching test (both of which are given at OSU). Students whose English has not been certified cannot be employed to teach in the Department, so students are encouraged to take the TSE before arriving on campus if possible.
5. All applicants must submit at least two brief samples of academic or formal writing, one in French or Italian and one in English.
6. All graduate students must be computer literate—i.e., they must be able to use an appropriate word-processing program for all written work in the department, including the Candidacy examination. Students not familiar with word processing and computers must take an appropriate course during their first semester of graduate work.

Graduate School Requirements for the Ph.D.

1. a minimum of 80 semester hours beyond the B.A. (GSH, VII.2).
2. completion of the following residence requirements after the first 30 hours of graduate credit have been completed:
 - minimum of 24 graduate credit hours at this university

- minimum of two consecutive pre-candidacy semesters or one semester and a summer session with full-time enrollment
 - minimum of six graduate credit hours over a period of at least two semesters or one semester and a summer session after admission to candidacy (GSH, VII.14).
3. successful completion of a Candidacy Examination no later than two semesters prior to graduation (GSH, VII.14).
 4. registration for 3 hours of graduate credit each semester (excluding May and summer sessions) following Candidacy until graduation (“continuous enrollment”) (GSH, III.1).*

 Continuous Enrollment rule for post-candidacy students: Students are expected to have completed all regular coursework before their Candidacy Examination. Upon successful completion of the examination, students must enroll each semester (excluding May and summer sessions) for 3 hours of graduate credit (not taken as an audit) until they complete their degree. A minimum of 3 credit hours is considered full-time enrollment for post-candidacy students; it is also the maximum number of credit hours allowable without exceeding graduate funding. Post-candidacy students must apply to the Department for a leave of absence for any period during which they are not continuously enrolled.

Program Guidelines

While we encourage our Ph.D. students to begin thinking of their main area of specialization and even of an eventual dissertation as early as possible in their program, we also want them to keep in mind the realities of the job market they will eventually enter. To that end, they should take a broad range of courses throughout their degree program in order to establish a familiarity with areas of French, Francophone, or Italian Studies outside of their specialization. Universities hiring at the Assistant Professor level today tend to favor candidates with solid pedagogical training and teaching experience and with at least two areas of teaching expertise. Examples of primary or secondary areas of specialization include, among many others, comparative studies, film studies, gender and sexuality studies, cultural studies, and second language acquisition.

THE PH.D. PROGRAM IN FRENCH

The Department offers a direct-admit doctoral program in French that gives students an opportunity to achieve a high level of scholarly competence and to develop the capacity to contribute original knowledge to the field. The goals of the Ph.D. in French are the following: 1) to provide students with the analytical tools and research skills necessary to conceive, create, and publish original and significant research in their chosen fields; 2) to train students to become effective post-secondary teachers in their fields through workshops, observations, apprenticeships, and the opportunity to teach a variety of courses; and 3) to prepare students to become leaders in their future institutions of employment and scholarly fields through seminars, workshops, and service opportunities that expose them to the administration of departments, universities, and professional organizations. With the innovative coursework and wide range of experiences in research, teaching, and service our program offers, students may expect to become competitive candidates on the job market and successful working professionals.

The path towards the Ph.D. degree follows a natural progression from course work to candidacy to dissertation. For students entering without an approved Masters degree in French Studies, the Ph.D. is a five-year program. Students take courses for approximately two and a half years then take their candidacy examinations in spring of their third year or autumn of their fourth year. Upon successfully passing the candidacy examinations, students submit and defend a dissertation prospectus in autumn of their fourth year, then engage in the writing of the dissertation. For students entering the Ph.D. program with an approved Masters degree in French Studies, the program normally takes four years. Students take courses for one and a half years then continue on as above. Students in the program who are making good progress but who have not finished their dissertation by their last year of regular funding may apply for an additional year of funding, but such funding is awarded on a competitive basis and is in no way guaranteed.

Departmental Requirements

1. All doctoral candidates must successfully complete required coursework, pass a Qualifying Paper and oral defense, pass a Candidacy Examination (with a written and an oral component), successfully defend a dissertation prospectus, and pass a final oral examination on the dissertation and the designated special areas of research.
2. Third Language Requirement: Candidates are required to demonstrate at least a reading knowledge of a third language, such as Latin, German, Italian, Arabic, or any other language related to the student's areas of study, subject to the approval of the student's advisor. This may be done by passing a level II examination given by the pertinent department, or by passing the two Latin, German, or Spanish Reading for Research courses (see pertinent department for course numbers) or the 1101-1103 series in other languages with a grade of "B" or better (the 1000-level series may not be substituted for 5000-level Reading for Research courses in departments where the latter exist, although students are free to take any additional courses on their own). Credit hours taken to satisfy the Language Requirement cannot be counted toward those required for the degree (GSH II.3.1.4).

Advisor

At the beginning of the doctoral program, students are assigned to the Graduate Advisor in French, who is also Chair of the Graduate Studies Committee. By Spring semester of the second year of study (or Spring of the first year for those entering with an M.A.), each student must choose a major area and two minor areas of specialization. At that time, the Graduate Advisor, in consultation with the student, will appoint a major advisor selected from departmental faculty specializing in the area. The new major advisor will chair the student's Candidacy Examination Committee and subsequently direct his/her dissertation. The appointment of a major advisor will be formalized with the appropriate departmental form (available from the Graduate Advisor or the ASC) and signed by the new advisor, the student, and the Graduate Advisor. Students should consult with the Graduate Advisor and/or their major advisor regularly throughout the program to ensure that they are fulfilling requirements and advancing in a timely manner.

Course Requirements

The majority of graduate courses in French fall under the following categories:

- I. Literature and Culture
 - 1. Middle Ages and Renaissance
 - 2. Modernity and Enlightenment
 - 3. Revolution and Beyond
 - 4. Francophone Studies
- II. Film and Visual Culture
- III. Language, Linguistics, and Second Language Acquisition
- IV. Theory and Practice

In selecting courses, please note that Ph.D. students are expected to take 6000-, 7000- and 8000-level courses whenever possible. The student will need the permission of his/her major advisor and the Graduate Advisor (if the two are different) to register for a 5000-level course. 8193, Individual Studies (independent study) may not be used to satisfy an area requirement without the approval of the Graduate Advisor. Independent study courses should be taken only as a last resort when regularly scheduled courses will not satisfy remaining requirements.

The minimum number of credit hours per semester for which a pre-candidacy graduate teaching associate must register to maintain full-time status is 8 (12 for fellowship students). The typical pre-candidacy course load in our program is three graduate courses per semester, or 9 hours (for fellowship students it is 4 courses). Graduate students may, however, with the permission of the Graduate Advisor, register for up to 16 hours per semester, although this many hours is not usually advisable. In any given semester, at least two of the graduate courses for which a student registers must be designated as French (FR) or combined French/Italian (FRIT) courses and at least two (not necessarily the same two) must be at the 7000-level or above.

Course requirements for students specializing in literature, culture, and/or film entering the program without a Masters degree:

48 of the 80 credit hours required for the Ph.D., or 16 3-hour courses, must be taken in the four categories above (I-IV). 6 additional credit hours will be earned by taking two required courses, 7301 and 7601, during the first semester.

Courses:	Credit hours required:
7301 Teaching French at the College Level	3
7601 Introduction to Literary and Cultural Theory	3
At least 1 course in each of categories I 1, 2, 3, 4; II; and III	18
At least 2 courses in category IV (all numbered 8601)	6
At least 2 additional courses in student's major area	6
At least 1 additional course in each of 2 minor areas	6
At least 4 additional elective courses*	12
	54

* In consultation with their advisor, students may count up to 6 credit hours of graduate courses (usually 2 courses) offered outside the department toward these 54 hours (if the student's area of specialization requires it, additional extra-departmental courses may be counted toward these hours with the approval of both the student's advisor and the Graduate Chair).

The remaining 26 hours needed to reach 80 will include the following course numbers:

8303 Teaching Apprenticeship	1-3
8998 Exam and Prospectus Preparation and 8999 Dissertation Writing	17-22
8899 Dissertation Workshop	3-6
	minimum 26 + 54 = 80

Students are required to take one 8303 Teaching Apprenticeship at some point during their program (which is worth 1 to 3 credit hours depending on whether taken pre- or post-Candidacy). Students who have passed their candidacy exams must register for 8899 Dissertation Workshop (1 credit) the following semester and each semester until graduation. Graduate courses taken outside the department above and beyond those permitted to count toward the required 54 hours of coursework described above may also be counted toward these remaining 26 hours.

Course requirements for students specializing in literature, culture, and/or film entering with an approved Masters degree:

Students specializing in literature, culture, and/or film entering the program with a Masters degree in French Studies will normally be awarded 30 credit hours toward the 80 needed for the Ph.D. They must then complete the following course requirements while here at OSU:

Courses:	Credit hours:
7301 Teaching French at the College Level	3
7601 Introduction to Literary and Cultural Theory	3
At least 1 course in 5 of the 6 following categories: II, 2, 3, 4; II; III	15

At least 1 additional course in major area	3
	27

* 7601 may be waived if student has already taken an equivalent course, subject to approval by the Graduate Advisor.

In consultation with their advisor, students may count up to 3 credit hours of graduate courses (usually 1 course) offered outside the department toward these 27 hours (if the student's area of specialization requires it, additional extra-departmental courses may be counted toward these hours with the approval of both the student's advisor and the Graduate Chair).

The remaining 23 hours needed to reach 80 will include the following course numbers:

8303 Teaching Apprenticeship	1-3
8998 Exam and Prospectus Preparation and 8999 Dissertation Writing	14-18
8899 Dissertation Workshop	3-6
	minimum 23 + 57 = 80

Students are required to take one 8303 Teaching Apprenticeship at some point during their program (which is worth 1 to 3 credit hours depending on whether taken pre- or post-Candidacy). Students who have passed their candidacy exams and defended their dissertation prospectus must register for 8899 Dissertation Workshop (1 credit) each semester until graduation. Graduate courses taken outside the department above and beyond those permitted to count toward the required 27 hours of coursework described above may also be counted toward these remaining 23 hours.

8899 Dissertation Workshop	3-6

30 (MA credit) + 33 (coursework) + 17 minimum (post coursework credits) = 80 credits

In order to finish the coursework needed for the SLA specialization, students entering with an approved MA will normally take their candidacy examination in autumn of their third year of the program and defend their prospectus that semester or the following spring.

Qualifying Paper

Each Spring semester, second-year graduate students in French who entered the program without an M.A. and first-year students who entered with an M.A. will undertake the Qualifying Paper, which will be used, along with students' course work up to that point, to determine whether they may continue in the program the following year. The Qualifying Paper is a 30-page (not including references, tables or appendices), polished, potentially publishable research paper whose directed preparation will give students an idea of what writing a dissertation chapter is like and which will help them determine in what area(s) they will specialize. This paper can be a revision and expansion of a research paper previously written for a course here at OSU or at another institution (in the latter case, the paper cannot be an Honors or M.A. thesis, thesis chapter, or other previously polished work); an expansion of a new paper being developed for a seminar being taken concurrently with the Qualifying Paper hours that spring; or a new idea the student wants to develop uniquely for the QP hours.

Guidelines for the qualifying paper (individual advisors may impose more frequent deadlines for sections of the paper, etc.):

Autumn Semester

Week 10, 4th week of October: QP students declare provisional title and advisor to graduate chair.

Students register for three credits of FR 8998 in Spring with chosen advisor (the Academic Services Coordinator will need to open up a number for each advisor). Students should begin preparing a bibliography and arrange a bi-weekly meeting schedule with their advisors in Spring with deadlines appropriate to individual needs in order to discuss students' research, bibliographic development, and writing.

Spring Semester

Week 2, 3rd Week of January: Deadline for second-year students who entered without an MA to apply to receive an MA. Form is available here:

Graduate Chair should check box indicating that students are continuing on to the PhD program; check "non-thesis" option.

Week 4, 1st week of February: Annotated bibliography due to advisors.

For the annotated bibliography, students should aspire towards a comprehensive list of works that have treated their specific question. The goal is for the student to understand how the question has been treated by different scholars through time, what the current state of the question is, and what deserves more attention or reexamination. Students should summarize each work's key arguments in a paragraph and assess briefly its importance to the field and to their research. The annotated bibliography is a tool to facilitate conversation with the advisor and so should be used in consultation beginning immediately when a field and advisor are chosen. See the MLA Handbook on preparing bibliographies, section 5.

Week 8, 1st week of March: First full draft of paper due to advisors. Advisors must return their revisions and comments to their advisees within 7 days.

At this point, the Graduate Chair will consult with advisors to assign faculty members as second readers.

Week 11, 4th week of March: Final version of papers due to advisors and Graduate Chair, to distribute to second readers.

The advisor and second reader will evaluate the paper using a pre-established evaluation rubric to be submitted to the Graduate Chair and should give the student feedback to help prepare for the colloquium presentation. Students should practice their oral presentation with their advisors.

Week 12, 1st week of April: Qualifying Paper colloquium

The overall goal of the colloquium is to give students the experience of taking a much longer project and converting it to an MLA-style presentation, a regular professional activity for academics. It is important that students learn to read and present such papers in an engaging, coherent, and professional manner. Paper presentations should be 15 minutes long and carefully timed. They should present the key theses, arguments, and methodology of the paper, introduce the texts or other objects of analysis (“texts” in the broadest sense of the term), and give a sense of the analysis, whether with a brief close reading of a text or piece of media or a section of the paper. Students may want to engage the audience with well-prepared use of media (e.g. Powerpoint, images, or a handout). Papers may be either in English or French but should use and quote sources in their original language to demonstrate proficiency, comprehension, and analytical skills in both languages.

The FRIT Academic Program Coordinator will collect all evaluation sheets and calculate each student’s average score on the qualifying paper, on the presentation, and on both combined.

Week 12, 2nd week of April: Qualifying Paper Oral Defense

Students, advisors, and a second faculty reader will be scheduled for 45-minute meetings. The Graduate Chair will preside to ensure consistency and will bring the MA examination form to be signed by the faculty present. The defense will be a chance to ask questions about the larger written project (in the manner of qualifying exams), to give feedback on the colloquium presentation, and to work with the student to set goals for future work. Students will also receive feedback on the annual faculty evaluation of their teaching, research, and service performance.

Advisors will all be supplied beforehand with a copy of each student’s scores on the Qualifying Paper and presentation and his/her advising report. A final decision concerning each student’s future in the program will be made at that time based on the Qualifying Paper scores, the student’s academic record in the program, and faculty evaluations as expressed during the Spring Graduate Student Evaluation meeting (which will have already taken place). The three possible outcomes are: 1) the granting (at the end of summer session) of an MA to those students who entered without one and an invitation to continue on to the PhD; 2) the granting (at the end of summer session) of a terminal MA to those students who entered without one and whose qualifying paper, oral presentation, and overall performance in the program are deemed adequate but not of a quality sufficient to continue on to the PhD; and 3) the dismissal from the program of those students whose qualifying paper, presentation, and academic performance to that point are considered inadequate to earn the MA or to continue to the PhD.

Final paperwork:

Students who entered without an MA degree and who successfully complete the first two years of the program (including passing the qualifying paper) must submit their signed MA examination form to the Graduate School by 5:00 pm on Friday of the 2nd week of April.

Candidacy Examination

Students entering without a Masters degree normally take their Candidacy Examination at the end of their third year or the beginning of their fourth. Those entering with an approved M.A. take the exam at the end of their second year or the beginning of their third. The Candidacy Examination includes a written and an oral portion. The written examination is divided into three parts, a major area and two minor areas. Students must choose their areas of specialization in consultation with the Graduate Advisor and/or their major advisor and should be mindful of the areas which faculty in the department cover. Students do not have to choose only areas and topics that are the primary specializations of the faculty, but at least one faculty member must have some expertise in each area chosen. Students must have taken at least one graduate course with each of their three examination committee members.

Generally, at least one area of the examination should be an historical period, such as the Middle Ages, the Enlightenment, or the 20th century. Another area should be a theoretical approach, such as postcolonial, gender, or film theory; cultural studies; or Second Language Acquisition. The third area could be a genre or a medium, such as theater or film; a geographical area, such as Quebec, North Africa, or Sub-Saharan Africa; or another historical period. One of the two minor areas could also be an area related to French Studies in another department, such as History, African and African-American Studies, Comparative Studies, or Near Eastern Languages and Cultures. In order to choose this last option, the student must have taken at least two courses in that area (as is the case for areas within FRIT), and the extra-departmental faculty member who taught one or both of these courses must agree to be a member of the student's Examination and Dissertation Committee.

At the start of preparation for the Candidacy Examination, the major advisor, in consultation with the student, forms an Examination Committee (consisting of no fewer than two faculty members from the Department of French and Italian) that includes the major advisor, one advisor for each of the two minor areas, and one additional faculty member (the "fourth reader," who should be conversant with the material in at least one field). The student then prepares, with the approval of the Examination Committee, working lists of the readings for which s/he expects to be held responsible. All members of the Committee must approve all the lists and ensure that adequate breadth is achieved. All finalized reading lists must be submitted to the Examination Committee no later than one semester before the scheduled examination.

Written Examination:

The specific format of the examination is determined by the student and the members of the Examination Committee and consists of 50% in the major area and 25% in each of the two minor areas, followed by a two-hour oral portion. The examination for at least one of the three areas must be completed in French, and at least one in English. The major examination will be an open-book, take-home examination obtained from the Department on a Friday at 4:30 p.m. and returned to the Department by 8:30 a.m. the following Monday. The completed draft of this part of the examination should be roughly 24-30 double-spaced typed pages in length. The two minor examinations will also be open-book take-home examinations obtained on a Friday at 4:30 p.m. and returned to the Department by 8:30 the following Monday. Each of these exams should be roughly 12-15 pages in length. In cases where a weekend proves inconvenient, the examination may be taken over any other comparable two-day period.

Written examinations must be done on computers. Print-outs must include page numbers and, in the case of French, the appropriate accents. During the period between the written and oral examinations, students should re-read all sections and prepare to defend them during the oral examination.

Oral Examination:

Once the student and his/her committee has decided on the date of the oral part of the exam (which should generally be held one week after the completion of the last part of the written exam), the student must fill out a Notification of Doctoral Candidacy Exam form from the Graduate School (see the Graduate Secretary for a copy), have the Graduate Studies Chair sign it, then submit it to the Graduate School at least two weeks prior to the scheduled date of the oral exam. The Graduate School will not accept the form if it is submitted later than two weeks before the oral exam.

The oral part of the Candidacy Examination will consist of a two-hour examination on the written part and the chosen areas of specialization. Students must bring a copy of their written examination to the Oral. At least one part of the oral examination must be conducted in French and at least one part in English.

Both the written and oral portions of the Candidacy Examination will be taken and completed within the same semester of the same academic year. Students who take their candidacy examination in autumn rather than the previous spring (with their advisor's permission) must schedule it so that the oral portion is completed by October 1. This is to ensure that the rest of the semester can be spent completing and defending the prospectus and beginning the dissertation. There will be no candidacy examinations given or taken during Summer session (May-August).

The student has successfully completed the Candidacy Examination only when the decision of the Examination Committee is unanimously affirmative (GSH, VII.7). If the student fails one or more parts of the exam, it is up to the Committee to decide if the student will be allowed to retake them; the option to retake parts of the exam is granted on a case-by-case basis and is not guaranteed. If the student is permitted to retake one or more parts of the exam, s/he must do so by the end of the semester following that in which s/he took the original exam. If the student fails one or more parts of the second exam, s/he is automatically dismissed from the program and the Graduate School. For additional information and rules concerning the Candidacy Examination, see the GSH, VII.4-7.

Provided that the student is in good standing (GSH, VII.9) at the end of the semester in which the Candidacy Examination is satisfactorily completed, s/he will be admitted to candidacy for a doctoral degree. Doctoral candidates must register for 3 graduate credit hours (and no more) per semester (excluding summer) until they successfully defend the dissertation and earn their degree.

Advising Guide for Ph.D. students in French (literature, culture, and/or film) entering without an approved M.A.

PART A: PRE-CANDIDACY COURSES

The majority of courses in the Ph.D. program in French fall under the following categories:

- I. Literature and Culture
 - 1. Middle Ages and Renaissance
 - 2. Modernity and Enlightenment
 - 3. Revolution and Beyond
 - 4. Francophone Studies
- II. Film and Visual Culture
- III. Linguistics and Second Language Acquisition
- IV. Theory and Practice

In order to ensure timely completion of the specific course requirements, students must take at least one course in at least six of the seven categories above within the first two years of the program.

Instructions for filling out the tables below:

The first two courses listed below are required; check the blank box next to each upon its completion. In the second table, the minimum number of courses required in each of the categories above (I-IV) is indicated in parentheses. Fill in the blank boxes next to each category with the course numbers of courses taken in that category. Beyond these minimum requirements, students must take at least 2 additional courses (3 total) in their major area and at least 1 additional course (2 total) in or related to each of their two minor areas. Indicate in the left margin (with an “M” and two “m”s) the major and minor areas chosen.

THE PH.D. PROGRAM IN ITALIAN STUDIES

(revised 8/16)

The Department offers a doctoral program in Italian Studies that gives students an opportunity to achieve a high level of scholarly competence and to develop the capacity to contribute original knowledge to the field. We are committed to the interdisciplinary study of Italian literature, film and culture, and our faculty has a great depth and breadth of expertise, particularly in medieval and Renaissance culture and literature, linguistics, modern and contemporary literature, and film studies.

The Ph.D. in Italian Studies builds on linguistic, literary, film and cultural studies to support a selection of interdisciplinary and cross-disciplinary studies. The program provides an intellectually rigorous and focused but flexible set of core courses that prepare students for the pursuit of more specific individual research interests. In addition to their specialization in literature, culture or film studies, students will have a minor field and complete a Graduate Interdisciplinary Specialization or a Graduate Minor related to either their major or minor field (students may petition to create their own minor provided that the desired Graduate Interdisciplinary Specialization or a Graduate Minor does not exist at OSU). They will also receive preparation in foreign language pedagogy and the history and structures of the Italian language, establish coordinated theoretical grounding in one or more disciplines, and achieve proficiency in two professionally relevant languages in addition to Italian and English.

The program entails full use of the department's broad cultural competencies, while giving students access to the wide range of interdisciplinary resources in the University's other departments and schools. Plans of study will include selected, pertinent courses in other departments depending on individual students' qualifications and specializations. This structure strongly supports interdisciplinarity, as students will interact with programs, departments and centers such as African American and African Studies, Second Language Studies, History, History of Art, Medieval and Renaissance Studies, Film Studies, Disability Studies, Comparative Cultural Studies, Sexuality Studies, Folklore and Women's, Gender and Sexuality Studies.

The goals of the Ph.D. in Italian Studies are the following: 1) to provide students with the analytical tools and research skills necessary to conceive, create, and publish original and significant research in their chosen fields; 2) to train students to become effective post-secondary teachers in their fields through workshops, observations, apprenticeships, and the opportunity to teach a variety of courses; and 3) to prepare students to become leaders in their future institutions of employment and scholarly fields through seminars, workshops, and service opportunities that expose them to the administration of departments, universities, and professional organizations. With the innovative coursework and wide range of experiences in research, teaching, and service our program offers, students may expect to become competitive candidates on the job market and successful working professionals.

The path towards the Ph.D. degree follows a natural progression from course work to candidacy to dissertation. For students entering without an approved Masters degree in Italian, the Ph.D. is a five-year program. Students take courses for two years and then take their qualifying examinations in spring of their second year. Upon successfully passing the qualifying examinations, students are admitted to doctoral-level coursework and take one more year of coursework; take their minor and major field candidacy exams; submit and defend a dissertation prospectus in the late fall of their fourth year and then engage in the writing of the dissertation.

For students entering the Ph.D. program with an approved Masters degree in Italian, the program normally takes four years. Students take courses for two years then continue on as above. Students in the program who are making good progress but who have not finished their dissertation by their last year of regular funding may apply for an additional year of funding, but such funding is awarded on a competitive basis and is in no way guaranteed.

Departmental Requirements

1. All doctoral candidates in Italian Studies must successfully complete required coursework, pass a Minor and a Major field Candidacy Exam (with a written and an oral component), successfully defend a dissertation prospectus, and pass a final oral examination on the dissertation and the designated special areas of research. All students entering without an approved M.A. in Italian must also pass qualifying exams at the end of their second year of study.
2. Third and Fourth Language Requirement: Candidates are required to demonstrate at least a reading knowledge of two other professionally relevant languages beyond Italian and English language, such as French, Latin, German, Spanish, Arabic, or any other language related to the student's areas of study, subject to the approval of the student's Advisor. For students entering without an approved M.A. in Italian, proficiency through coursework or exams in one of the two professionally relevant languages will be required by the end of the second year, the other by the end of the fourth year. For students entering with an approved M.A. in Italian, proficiency in one language will be required by the end of the first year, the other by the end of the second year. While speaking proficiency in the designated second languages will certainly be encouraged, reading proficiency (above the second year level) will be seen as the more important requirement. Students can demonstrate proficiency in one of three ways: 1) by passing the graduate reading proficiency exam given by a Department; 2) by passing a level II examination in German; 3) by taking and passing German 6101 and 6102, French 6571 and 6572 or Latin 5890 and 5891 (reading courses); 4) by taking and passing the 1101-1103 series in other languages with a grade of "B" or better (the 1000-level series may not be substituted for 5000 and 6000-level reading courses in departments where the latter exist, although students are free to take any additional courses on their own). Credit hours taken to satisfy the Language Requirement cannot be counted toward those required for the degree (GSH IV.1 and VII.1)

Advisor

During the first semester of study, the Graduate Chair in Italian will advise students. The student may change the adviser upon consultation with and approval of the Graduate Studies Committee Chair and the faculty involved. All courses will be chosen in consultation with and with the approval of the adviser.

The student will, in consultation with the adviser, select the fields of concentration that will later form the basis of the student's minor and major qualifying exams by week four of the third year of study for students entering without an approved M.A. in Italian and by spring of the first year of study for students entering with an approved M.A. in Italian. The student will also, with adviser approval, select the other members of the Advisory Committee, who should be representative of the areas of the student's specialization. The Advisory Committee is composed of at least three authorized graduate faculty members, including the student's adviser. At least one member of the committee must be from a department or program other than French and Italian, unless the minor field is French. This committee will serve as the minor and major field candidacy exam committee.

Course Requirements

Students entering without an approved Masters degree:

For students entering the program without an approved Masters degree, 54 of the 81 credit hours required for the Ph.D., or 18 3-hour courses, are taken as follows:

Required courses (all three hours): 12 hours

5331: The History of the Italian Language
7601: Introduction to Literary and Cultural Theory
8601: Theory and Practice
7301: Teaching Fr and It at the college level

Core Courses: 27 hours
Nine courses selected from among 20 three-credit courses, includes Major Field (see list of “Core Courses” in “List of Graduate Courses in Italian Studies” at the end of this section).

Five courses outside the department: 15 hours
(These courses can be taken in French Studies if the student’s minor field focuses on French literature, culture or cinema)

The remaining 27 hours needed to reach 81 will include the following course numbers:

8303 Teaching Apprenticeship	1-6
8998 Exam and Prospectus Preparation and 8999 Dissertation Writing	24-36
8899 Dissertation Workshop	2-6
	minimum = 81

Students are required to register for 8899 Dissertation Workshop (1 credit) each semester of their Candidacy until graduation.

The minimum number of credit hours per semester for which a pre-candidacy graduate student must register to maintain full-time status is 8. The typical pre-candidacy course load in our program is three graduate courses per semester, or 9 hours. Graduate students may, however, with the permission of the Graduate Advisor, register for up to 18 hours per semester.

51 Total Hours

In selecting courses, please note that Ph.D. students are expected to take 5000-, 6000-, 7000-, and 8000-level courses whenever possible. In certain circumstances, students may be permitted to take a 4000-level course and have it count toward the Ph.D. The student will need the permission of his/her advisor to register for 4000 level courses. 8193, Individual Studies (independent study) may not be used to satisfy a requirement without the approval of the Graduate Advisor. Independent study courses should be taken only as a last resort when regularly scheduled courses will not satisfy remaining requirements.

Qualifying Examinations

Students entering the program without an approved M.A. in Italian will take comprehensive written and oral qualifying exams at the end of the fourth semester of study. The qualifying examination is based on three lists of a combined minimum of forty entries that span the entire breadth of Italian cultural production and must be submitted for approval to members of the Qualifying Exam committee at least two months before the exam. When compiling the three lists, students should consult the comprehensive list (available from the graduate advisor in Italian) for entries on literature, film, and linguistics and students can substitute entries not on that list with the advisor's approval. The number of entries will vary (at a minimum of forty) depending upon complexity and length. At least eighteen of the entries must be literary sources, broadly considered, at least five must be films or television programs, and at least two must be related to linguistics. Students are encouraged to include items from the visual arts (painting, architecture, sculpture, photography) and the performing arts (dance, music, opera, theater) as well. The list should be balanced in terms of coverage and genre and must be arranged into the following three categories:

1. Italian Culture through the Ages. Fifteen or so entries covering the Duecento to the New Millennium, spread across at least seven centuries. In addition to literary entries, students are strongly encouraged to include at least one entry from each of the following areas: film, linguistics, performing arts, visual arts.
2. Genre and/or Media. (e.g., the visual arts, the novel, tragedy, lyric, autobiography, linguistics, comedy, performing arts, the popular, philosophy). Fifteen or so entries covering the Duecento to the New Millennium, spread across at least seven centuries.
3. A Critical Question and/or Theme in the history of Italian culture. (e.g., otherness, the environment, war, love, power, gender and sexuality, ideology/politics, class, migration). Fifteen or so entries covering the Duecento to the New Millennium, spread across at least seven centuries.

Written Examination:

All students will write at least one section of the examination in Italian. The exam will have two main components: the first is composed of two proctored exams of three hours each covering on one day list #1 and on the other day list #2 without notes or books (a dictionary is permitted.) The second part is an open-book, take-home examination covering list #3 picked up at the Department on a Friday at 4:30 p.m. and returned to the Department by 9:00 a.m. the following Monday. The completed version of this part of the examination should be roughly 13-15 typed pages in length (Times New Roman, 12-point font, double spaced, one inch margins) accompanied by a list of works cited and consulted (not included in page count). In cases where a weekend proves inconvenient, the examination may be taken over any other comparable two-day period.

Written examinations must be done on computers. During the period between the written and oral examinations, students should re-read all sections and prepare to discuss and defend them during the oral examination.

Oral Examination:

The Oral Examination will last between 60 and 90 minutes. Students must bring a copy of their written examinations to the Oral. During this final part of the examination, students will be examined on items on their readings lists and on the results of their written exams. All members of the Qualifying Examination Committee will be present during the entire oral portion. At the conclusion of the oral portion of the Qualifying Examination and in the absence of the student, Qualifying Examination Committee will determine if the student has satisfactorily passed the Qualifying Examination. In the case of a negative decision, the student will be allowed to take the exam only one more time.

Qualifying Examination Procedures:

1. The Graduate adviser chairs the Qualifying examination.
2. The Graduate Advisor is responsible for soliciting and collecting the questions for the written examination from the other members of the examining committee. If necessary, the Advisor may solicit questions from area specialists other than those who sit on the examining committee.
3. The examining committee is appointed by the Graduate adviser and normally consists of three to five faculty members. All members of the Qualifying Examination Committee will be present during the entire oral portion.
4. The examining committee is fully responsible for evaluating and scoring the three written exams with a score of “fail,” “low pass,” “pass,” “high pass.” Scores on the three exams can both increase or decrease as a result of performance in the oral examination. Only the Qualifying Examination Committee members are to be present for the discussion of the student’s performance and the decision about the outcome. The student will be informed of the decision in the presence of the committee. All other regulations pertaining to the Qualifying degree will be those of the graduate school.
5. Conduct of the written and oral examinations:
 - a. The first written part of the Qualifying examination (the two exams lasting three hours each) will be monitored.
 - b. For the first written part of the Qualifying examination, no pre-written materials (books, notes, class handouts, study guides, etc.) or internet use will be allowed. Students are expected to adhere to the highest standards of academic conduct. All suspected cases of misconduct will be reported to the Committee on Academic Misconduct as required by University rules.
 - c. Dictionaries will be allowed during the first written part of the Qualifying examination.
 - d. For the second (take-home) part of the Qualifying examination, students may consult pre-written materials (books, notes, class handouts, the internet.) Students are expected to adhere to the highest standards of academic conduct. All suspected cases of misconduct will be reported to the Committee on Academic Misconduct as required by University rules.
 - e. The oral examination will take place no longer than two weeks after the written examination.
 - f. The oral examination will be 60 to 90 minutes long. It will not be restricted to the material treated in the written part of the examination and may cover any topics on the Reading List.
 - g. At least one part of the oral examination will be conducted in Italian and at least one part in English.

6. The three possible outcomes of the Qualifying Examination are: 1) the granting of an M.A. and an invitation to continue on to the Ph.D.; 2) the granting of a terminal M.A. to those students whose qualifying exams, oral exam, and/or overall performance in the program are deemed adequate but not of a quality sufficient to continue on to the Ph.D.; and 3) the dismissal from the program of those students whose performance on the written and/or oral component of the qualifying exam, and/or general academic performance to that point are considered inadequate to earn the M.A.

Candidacy Examination

Candidacy Examination Committee

At the start of preparation for the Candidacy Examinations, the major advisor, in consultation with the student, forms an Examination Committee of at least four members (consisting of no fewer than two faculty members from Italian and one faculty member outside of Italian).

Minor Field Candidacy Exam

Students will have a minor in a field related to their specialization through the completion of a Graduate Interdisciplinary Specialization or a Graduate Minor unless the GIS or the Graduate Minor relates to the major field. Students may petition to create their own minor provided that the desired Graduate Interdisciplinary Specialization or a Graduate Minor does not exist at OSU.

Students entering without an approved M.A. take the written portion of their Minor Field Candidacy Examination at the end of their third year. Those entering with an approved M.A. take the written portion of their Minor Field Candidacy exam at the beginning of the fourth semester of study. The Minor Field Candidacy Examination includes a written and an oral portion.

At the start of preparation for the Candidacy Examination the student chooses a Minor Field Advisor and the student then prepares, with the approval of the Minor Field Advisor, a working list of the items for which s/he will be held responsible. A typical list will have no fewer than twenty-five items, although lists will vary depending upon length and complexity. All members of the Committee must approve the list and ensure that adequate breadth is achieved. The finalized reading list must be submitted to the Examination Committee fourteen weeks before the scheduled examination. In the case that the minor field advisor is from outside of The Department of French and Italian, the advisor will circulate the minor field exam for approval to the Candidacy Committee one week before the minor field exam.

Guidelines for the Minor Field Candidacy Exam (individual advisors may impose more frequent deadlines for sections of the paper, etc.):

- During the semester prior to and during the Exam, the student will register for 3 hours of 8998 (Exam and Prospectus preparation) with his or her advisor.
- Students must meet with their advisors at least once every two weeks during the semester to discuss their progress on their lists and syllabus.

- Students must submit one semester syllabus for a course taught in English in their minor field at least one week prior to the written portion of the exam.

Written Examination (Minor Field Candidacy Examination):

The minor examination will be an open-book, take-home examination picked up at the Department on a Friday at 4:30 p.m. and returned to the Department by 9:00 a.m. the following Monday. The completed draft of this part of the examination should be roughly 26-30 pages in length (Times New Roman, 12" font, double-spaced with one-inch margins). In cases where a weekend proves inconvenient, the examination may be taken over any other comparable two-day period. Written examinations must include page numbers.

During the period between the written and oral examinations, students should re-read the exam and prepare to defend it during the oral examination.

The examining committee is fully responsible for evaluating and scoring the Minor Field written examination with a score of "fail," "low pass," "pass," or "high pass." Committee members should return scored exams to the student no later than ten days after the exam. The score on the exam can both increase or decrease as a result of performance in the oral examination.

Major Field Candidacy Exam

At the beginning of the fourth year for students entering without an approved M.A. in Italian and at the end of the second year for students entering with an approved M.A. in Italian, students will have developed a 30-35 page polished research paper of a caliber suitable for publication in a scholarly journal that will act as the major field candidacy exam. Students also prepare, with the approval of the advisor, a working list of at least twenty items for which s/he will be held responsible during the oral portion of the Candidacy Exam. The preparation of the Major field candidacy exam paper will establish the area(s) in which students will specialize and lay the groundwork for a dissertation chapter. This paper can be a revision and expansion of a research paper previously written for a course here at OSU or at another institution (in the latter case, the paper cannot be an Honors or M.A. thesis, thesis chapter, or other previously polished work); an expansion of a new paper being developed for a seminar being taken concurrently with the Exam prep (EP) hours that spring; or a new idea the student wants to develop uniquely for the EP hours. In addition, the student will generate two semester syllabi for courses based upon their major field specialization, one at the graduate level and one at the undergraduate level. One syllabus must be designed for a course taught in English and the other for a course taught in Italian.

Guidelines for the Major Candidacy Exam paper (individual advisors may impose more frequent deadlines for sections of the paper, etc.):

- During the semester (or summer) prior to and during the Exam, the student will register for 3 hours of 8998 (Exam and Prospectus preparation) with his or her advisor. The advisor will direct the research for and writing, revision, and/or expansion of the Major Candidacy Exam paper throughout the semester. The advisor will also oversee the creation of a major field list of at least twenty items related to the major field of study (this list should be separate from the topic of the Major field candidacy paper and should be comprehensive of the Major field).

- Students must meet with their advisors at least once every two weeks during the semester (in person or via Skype) to discuss their research, bibliography construction, writing, and syllabi.

- The list of at least twenty items must be submitted to the advisor 14 weeks prior to the oral exam.

- An annotated bibliography (with paragraph-length summaries of each source) must be submitted to the advisor ten weeks prior to the oral exam.

- A draft of the full paper must be submitted to the advisor four weeks prior to the oral exam. Advisors must return their revisions and comments to their advisees within 7 days.

- Students must submit the final version of their paper to their advisor (who will distribute copies of the paper to all members of the Advisory Committee) two weeks prior to the oral exam. The advisor and faculty will evaluate the paper using a pre-established evaluation sheet and return comments to the student one week prior to the oral exam with a score of “fail,” “low pass,” “pass,” or “high pass.” The score on the exam can both increase or decrease as a result of performance in the oral examination.

- Students must submit two semester syllabi for courses based upon their major field of specialization one week prior to the oral exam, one at the graduate level and one at the undergraduate level. One syllabus must be designed for a course taught in English and the other for a course taught in Italian. The advisor and faculty will evaluate the syllabi using a pre-established evaluation sheet.

Oral Examination of the Minor and Major Candidacy Exams

Once the student and his/her committee has decided on the date of the oral examination part of the candidacy exam (which should generally be held two weeks after the completion of the Major Qualifying Exam paper), the student must fill out a Notification of Doctoral Candidacy Exam form from the Graduate School (see the Graduate Secretary for a copy), have the Graduate Studies Chair sign it, then submit it to the Graduate School at least two weeks prior to the scheduled date of the oral exam. The Graduate School will not accept the form if it is submitted later than two weeks before the oral exam.

The oral part of the Candidacy Examination will consist of a two-hour examination. During the exam, students will respond to questions on the three syllabi, Minor Field written exam, Major Field paper, and Major field list. Students must bring a copy of their syllabi, Minor Field Written exam and Major Field paper to the Oral. At least one part of the oral examination must be conducted in Italian and at least one part in English.

There will be no Candidacy Examinations given or taken during Summer session.

The student has successfully completed the Candidacy Examination only when the decision of the Examination Committee is unanimously affirmative (GSH, VII.7). If the student fails one or more parts of the Minor qualifying exam, Major qualifying exam paper, and oral examination, it is up to the Committee to decide if the student will be allowed to rewrite or retake them; the option to retake parts of the exam is granted on a case-by-case basis and is not guaranteed and no parts of the candidacy examination will be given or taken during the Summer session. If the student is permitted to retake one or more parts of the exam, s/he must do so by the end of the semester following that in which s/he took the original exam. If the student fails one or more parts of the second exam, s/he is automatically dismissed from the program and the Graduate School. For additional information and rules concerning the Candidacy Examination, see the GSH, VII.4-7.

Provided that the student is in good standing (GSH, VII.9) at the end of the semester in which the Candidacy Examination is satisfactorily completed, s/he will be admitted to candidacy for a doctoral degree. Doctoral candidates must register for 3 graduate credit hours (and no more) per semester (excluding summer) until they successfully defend the dissertation and earn their degree.

Dossier

Students will create a dossier of teaching and research materials, which they will submit to their online Box portfolio according to the deadlines below. Pedagogical materials for the dossier will be compiled in collaboration with the director of the Italian language program (Prof. Janice M. Aski).

For students entering without an approved M.A. in Italian:

1. A 450-word teaching philosophy (beginning of 9th semester).
2. A list of workshops, webinars, and conferences related to teaching that students attended (beginning of 9th semester).
3. Sample teaching video: A digital recording of one class with the lesson plan and the syllabus for the course (end of 8th semester).
4. Sample syllabus minor exam (end of 6th semester).
5. Sample syllabus UG major exam (beginning of 7th semester).

The Dissertation in French or Italian

The dissertation is a scholarly contribution to knowledge in the student's area of research and specialization. It should demonstrate original and substantial research, in-depth knowledge of the field of study and an ability to work independently.

Committee

After passing their candidacy examinations, the student begins work on the dissertation. The Advisory Committee, with any necessary or appropriate membership adjustments, now becomes the Dissertation Committee. All committees will be assembled according to the content of exams and of the dissertation. (For additional requirements pertaining to the Dissertation and the Dissertation Committee, consult the GSH, VII).

Prospectus

The student will prepare a written prospectus of the dissertation topic in consultation with members of the Dissertation Committee and present it to the Committee for approval at a formal one-hour defense, arranged by the student and dissertation advisor and chaired by the Graduate Advisor. The prospectus (normally a 15- to 20-page, double-spaced document plus a bibliography) should contain a detailed description of the topic, scope, and methodology of the proposed dissertation; a brief description of each of the chapters; and a bibliography. It is the responsibility of the student to deliver copies of the prospectus to all members of the Committee and the Graduate Advisor no later than ten days before the defense date. The formal defense of the prospectus must be held no later than the end of the semester following that in which the student passed the Candidacy Examination. If the student fails the prospectus defense, s/he may be allowed, at the discretion of the Dissertation Committee, to revise/rewrite the prospectus and to defend it again no later than the end of the following term (semester or summer). If s/he fails this second attempt, s/he will be dismissed from the program.

Students' guide to writing the prospectus:

The prospectus is a document that outlines your project, assuring your committee that you are ready to write the dissertation. In professional terms, it is similar to proposals that authors send to editors when they hope to have a book published. It should contain the following elements.

1. Provisional title

The title should: a) be succinct, b) be appealing, c) contain key search terms.

2. Opening

Open with some material that introduces and demonstrates the problem worth solving. This is often a key bit of text or an anecdote. Then, ask your question(s): what is puzzling here? Why does this deserve further inquiry? Why is this important? For whom is this important? (As William Germano says, "a scholarly book for anybody is a scholarly book for nobody," so specify your imagined audience).

3. Material for examination

Briefly introduce your objects of study (texts, films, etc.). Give very short plot summaries. Introduce the authors and their historical context. You might mention reception (who read/watched them, and when? have they been popular, or not?) as you make the case for why these texts deserve further attention, and why they should be studied together.

4. Literature Review/ Historiography

How has this question, or the various elements of this problem, been studied in the past? Briefly review the history of the treatment of the question, highlighting trends in the profession and opposing views and controversies. Build a case for why this deserves further inquiry or a new perspective. Has this question been neglected? Here, you are building a case that your research is an original contribution to scholarship.

5. Methodology

What critical, theoretical framework will you use to address the question? What previous authors' thinking will be useful for looking at this question in a new way? Is your approach comparative, interdisciplinary, semiotic, philological, feminist, historicist, materialist, revisionist...? What "shoulders of giants" will you stand upon (in Bernard of Chartres' formulation) to avoid reinventing the wheel, and moreover to reach higher? How are you being "scientific" in evaluating your material, i.e. what standards of accuracy or veracity will you use?

6. Limits of the study

Describe what you will NOT be able to do in the dissertation. You must impose some geographical and chronological boundaries, due to limits of time and space. What problems do your sources pose (editions, manuscripts, lacunae, access, biases...)? What questions cannot be posed of these sources? Keep in mind that there will be questions you would like to pursue but which must be kept for another time.

7. Chapter descriptions

Devote a paragraph to each chapter. Ask a guiding question for each chapter. Discuss what specific text(s) will be the focus and demonstrate how your critical framework will operate to elucidate your sources in the chapter.

8. Conclusion

At the prospectus stage, you should not have arrived at your final conclusion already; it should evolve and develop as you go through the research and writing process. You can end the prospectus with an invitation: why is exploring this material compelling? How might it help readers? Some writers include a bit of personal examination at this point, for instance talking about what inspired them to undertake this research, or what qualifications they have that give them a unique perspective. If included, however, such an examination should be brief and professional.

9. Bibliography

The goal of a dissertation bibliography is to be comprehensive. You are becoming an expert on the current state of your question. You should include everything you find that is related to your topic: this in itself is a contribution to scholarship. Include everything relevant, even if you have not read it yet. The prospectus represents a plan for what you are undertaking rather than just an account of what you have already done.

Changes to a Dissertation:

If there are changes in topic, scope, or methodology that substantially modify a dissertation, a revised prospectus must be submitted for approval to the Dissertation Committee and the Graduate Advisor.

Dissertation Workshop, FRIT 8899

FRIT 8899 is a faculty-led workshop in which Ph.D. candidates meet bi-weekly to discuss and critique their current dissertation research. All Ph.D. candidates in the department must register for one credit of 8899 each semester until they graduate. It will provide a forum in which candidates will be able to present their work orally and have at least one prospectus, chapter, conference paper, or article draft read and critiqued by their peers and a faculty member each semester. It is designed to keep dissertation writers on task and to help them develop and maintain an intellectual community with their professors and peers. It will also help them improve their writing and public speaking skills.

Schedule for Approval of a Dissertation:

1. Readers' Copies: In order to ensure that the readers have sufficient time to read the dissertation and that the candidate has sufficient time to make possible changes in the manuscript, the provisional first draft must be in the hands of the readers by the beginning of the second week of the semester in which the degree is sought. For important further details about timing, see GSH VII.9-12).
2. The Final Oral Examination will not be scheduled until the dissertation advisor and the readers have approved the first draft by signing the Draft Approval Form. At that time, the student must also submit the complete, typed dissertation to the Graduate School for format review.
3. The Final Oral Examination Committee is composed of the three-member Dissertation Committee, plus the Graduate School Representative. The Graduate Advisor only takes part in the Candidacy Examination if s/he is one of the student's Dissertation Committee members.
4. It is the responsibility of the candidate to deliver a copy of the approved dissertation draft to the Graduate School Representative no later than one week before the Final Oral Examination.
5. The student is considered to have completed the Final Oral Examination successfully only when the vote by the Final Oral Examination Committee is unanimously affirmative.

The Graduate School stipulates that after being admitted to candidacy, a student has five years total to complete the dissertation (GSH, VII.14). If the dissertation is not completed within five years of the Candidacy Examination, the Department is required by the Graduate School to re-administer a second Candidacy Exam if the student wishes to continue. If s/he passes this second examination, s/he will then have no more than two additional years to finish and successfully defend the dissertation.

Teaching Apprenticeship, FRIT 8303

FRIT 8303 is an apprenticeship for doctoral students to work with faculty members on the design and teaching of 2000 to 3000-level language, linguistics, literature, culture, and film courses. Students may register for the 8303 up to 2 times during the graduate program and for up to 3 credit hours each time they take it. Interested students should contact the faculty member who will teach the course in which they are interested the following semester.

Guidelines:

- The faculty mentor will discuss with the apprentice the goals and expected learning outcomes of the course; how the reading list, activities, and assignments are intended to help students reach those goals; and how the examinations and other graded assignments are intended to measure those expected outcomes.
- The apprentice will attend the course regularly.
- The faculty mentor will discuss with and demonstrate to the apprentice how s/he writes and evaluates assignments and examinations.
- Twice during the semester, the apprentice will be asked to plan and teach a lesson on the syllabus under the guidance and supervision of the faculty mentor. The mentor will then provide to the student oral and written feedback on each of his/her lessons.
- At the end of the semester, the apprentice will submit two assignments:
 - a) an annotated bibliography compiled in consultation with the faculty mentor, covering (1) a number of possible primary texts (other than those used in the course being taught) that could be used in such a course, and (2) a number of important secondary sources that provide background for teaching the course.
 - b) A complete syllabus for a course similar to the one in which s/he apprenticed and that s/he could submit with a job application.

- Apprentices are not to serve as graders, research associates, or substitute teachers for the faculty member. The teaching apprenticeship is for the benefit of the student; it serves to give him/her experience and training in conceiving, constructing, and teaching an intermediate-level course.
- Students who have done a graduate apprenticeship will have priority over students who have not when the department is able to assign a 2000- or 3000-level course to a graduate teaching associate.

GUIDELINES FOR GRADUATE TEACHING ASSOCIATES, FELLOWSHIP STUDENTS, AND OTHER STUDENTS RECEIVING FEE WAIVERS

(revised 8/16)

The Department of French and Italian awards a number of Graduate Teaching Associateships each year to students who are preparing the Ph.D. The position of Graduate Teaching Associate carries with it important responsibilities. Chief among these is the maintenance of a proper balance between studies, the first priority for the Associate, and teaching. In order to retain an Associateship, the student must, in the opinion of the faculty, be making reasonable progress towards completion of the degree and have demonstrated effective teaching. Teaching Associates must seek permission from the Graduate Chair and their advisor before accepting any other employment beyond their teaching associateship (whether within the university or outside of it). If permission is granted, this additional employment may not under any circumstances exceed ten hours per week.

Initial Appointment

1. All Graduate Associates must be enrolled in the Graduate School. Applicants for an Associateship who are not enrolled must make simultaneous application for admission. The awarding of an Associateship is contingent upon such admission. In the Spring semester of each year a faculty committee evaluates all applications, taking into account academic achievement, letters of recommendation, previous experience either in the use of the language (travel, study abroad, etc.) or in teaching (elementary, secondary, tutoring, etc.), and any other information which seems useful and pertinent.
2. Offers for new Associateships are normally made in early Spring for the following academic year. A student who accepts an appointment is still free to resign until April 15, after which he or she is obligated not to accept another appointment without obtaining formal release from this Department. At times, the Department may have to make additional appointments after this date, in which case an effort will be made to complete all arrangements by the end of the Summer session.

Workload

1. It is expected that a graduate student who is a Graduate Associate will register for three courses in the Department each semester. In most cases this will mean 9 hours.
2. Unless the student is on fellowship, in Autumn semester of their first year of residence Graduate Teaching Associates must enroll in 7301 (Teaching French and Italian at the College Level), visit demonstration classes regularly, and consult periodically with teaching supervisors about their progress as teachers.
3. A Graduate Teaching Associate is normally assigned to teach one four-credit course per semester. This is called a 50% appointment. GRA's and GTA's are expected to work approximately 20 hours per week for a 50% appointment.
4. After their first year, Graduate Teaching Associates may submit a request any given semester to have a 75% appointment for the following semester, which means that s/he would have two teaching assignments and would earn 1.5 times the stipend received for teaching one course. Such assignments are usually to teach two sections of the same course or to teach one course and to serve as a grader for a large lecture course. See “Some additional guidelines for the PhD in French or Italian” below for more information.

5. Graduate Teaching Associates work under the direction and with the guidance of faculty supervisors. For each section to which they are assigned, they have the responsibility of preparing classes, holding office hours, attending staff meetings, grading, and, in general, performing those tasks which are expected of a university teacher. Such out-of-class duties require about fifteen (15) hours per week.
6. When circumstances warrant, the Chair may invite post-candidacy students to teach at the 2000- or 3000-course level. To be eligible to teach such a course in the department, students must have successfully completed a relevant 8303 Graduate Teaching Apprenticeship course and have achieved an excellent record of teaching. Such appointments are made on the basis of merit and not necessarily on seniority and are not guaranteed.

Evaluation of Performance

1. Graduate Associates' teaching contracts are renewed by the Chair of the Department upon the recommendation of the faculty of the Department, which meets for this purpose during each Spring semester. These recommendations are based on evaluations of the Associate's performance as both teacher and student. If an Associate's performance is not satisfactory in one or both of these areas, s/he will be warned. If performance does not improve the following semester, s/he could lose his/her Associateship and/or be dismissed from the graduate program at the end of that semester.
2. All Graduate Teaching Associates are periodically visited in their classrooms by a teaching supervisor. The purpose of such visits is to evaluate the Associate's performance as a teacher and to offer helpful advice when this is deemed necessary. After each classroom visit, the supervisor meets with the GTA to discuss his/her performance and fills out a GTA Teaching Evaluation. The report is then discussed with each GTA by his or her supervisor. Thereafter, it is retained in Departmental files. During each Spring semester, a summary of the Teaching Evaluation Reports for each GTA is presented by the supervisor to the faculty of the Department.
3. GTA Academic Evaluation Reports are also prepared for each GTA by their professors. The primary purpose of these reports is to provide graduate students with specific information about their performance in courses taken during the year, but they also assist in the evaluation of such performance as a basis for recommendations for the renewal or termination of GTA contracts. Like the Teaching Evaluation Reports, these evaluations are also forwarded in summary form to the faculty for their Spring meetings, in this instance by the GTA's academic (M.A. or Ph.D.) advisor.

After the Spring meetings have taken place, the advisors meet with the Associates to discuss the Academic Evaluation Reports and to pass along any advice or suggestions that the faculty may have for the Associates.

Fellowship Recipients

Students receiving a first-year or a dissertation-year fellowship do not teach during that year. They must hold no other appointment or outside employment during the fellowship year, except for approved supplemental appointments or fellowships (GSH X.1). Pre-candidacy fellowship recipients must register for at least 12 hours of graduate credit (5000-level or higher) during any semester in which the fellowship is held, and 6 hours during summer session. Audited credit hours do not count toward these totals (GSH X.1). Dissertation-year fellowship recipients must register for 3 hours of graduate credit (usually 8999) each semester and during summer session. See GSH section X for more details.

First-year fellowship recipients may choose to take 7301, Teaching French and Italian at the College Level, during Autumn semester of either their first year or their second year of the Ph.D.

Some additional guidelines for the PhD programs in French and Italian (important!):

The purpose of these additional guidelines is to help students complete the requirements for the degree and successfully defend their dissertation in as timely a manner as possible. Because of the Graduate School's Continuous Enrollment Policy, which states that PhD candidates (those students who have passed their candidacy examination) must register for at least three credit hours every Autumn and Spring semester until they successfully defend their dissertation, students who run out of GTA funding before they finish will not only lose their stipend but have to pay for these three credits each semester until they finish (students do not have to register in summer unless they defend the dissertation during any summer other than that immediately following their last semester of funding). For residents of Ohio (who continue to be residents of Ohio until they finish), these fees currently amount to about $2300 per semester, plus the full (non-subsidized) cost of student health insurance unless the student has another insurance plan (the current cost of student health insurance is about $1,275 per semester). For non-Ohio residents, these fees are now around $6000 per semester plus insurance. You can therefore see that the costs to you of not finishing your degree within your funding window are unfortunately substantial. It is for this reason that the department would like to do all it can to help you keep your "eye on the prize" and complete your degree on time, whether that means in April or August of your last year of funding.

Guidelines for students in French only:

- Students who elect to take their candidacy examination in autumn rather than the previous spring semester (with their advisor's permission) must schedule them so that the oral portion is completed by September 30. This is to ensure that the rest of the semester can be spent completing and defending the prospectus and beginning the dissertation.
- Students entering without a Masters degree must successfully defend their dissertation prospectus no later than November 30 of their 4th year; students entering with an approved Masters must defend their prospectus no later than November 30 of their 3rd year. Students and advisors are strongly encouraged to devise a major candidacy exam whose answer can be transformed into the prospectus.

- Students who participate in the Rennes exchange program are strongly encouraged to use that year (during which they will be teaching only part-time) to devise and/or finish their candidacy examination lists, to write their dissertation prospectus, and/or to do research for and write sections of their dissertation. Advisors are willing and able to work with you remotely.

For students in both French and Italian:

- Requests for 75% appointments will be considered, as usual, by the Director of the Language Program, but also by the Graduate Chair and the student's graduate advisor (if these are different individuals). Such requests will only be granted when the following three conditions are met: 1) there is a need in the teaching schedule (obviously), 2) the student has a good teaching record, and 3) the student is on track to finish the degree by the end of his/her four or five years of funding. The purpose of this increased oversight of 75% appointments is to ensure that students have enough time in their schedules to devote to their studies and research. In the long run, it is more sound financially to finish before your funding runs out than to make a bit more money while you're here but not finish on time.
- Progress toward the degree will also have more weight than in the past in the review of applications for summer teaching and departmental grants and awards, such as the Bulatkin Travel Award, the Bulatkin Summer Scholarship, and the Astier Award.
- Students in their penultimate or last year of funding are strongly encouraged to apply for internal and external dissertation fellowships, such as, among others:
 - Ohio State Graduate School Presidential Fellowship
<http://www.gradsch.osu.edu/presidential-fellowships.html>
 - Chateaubriand Fellowship <http://www.chateaubriand-fellowship.org/>

See also the Graduate School's page on external funding opportunities at <http://www.gradsch.osu.edu/external-funding-sources.html>

- When its budget permits, the department may award on a competitive basis an additional semester of graduate teaching associate funding to one to two students who can demonstrate that they will successfully defend their dissertation by the end of that semester. Students in good standing may apply for one of these grants during their last semester of funding. Applications should include 1) a three-page summary of the dissertation project and its chapters, 2) a statement on exactly where the student is in the writing process (how many chapters have been turned in to the advisor and how many have been revised at the time of the application submission) and a plan for completion, and 3) a letter of support from the applicant's dissertation advisor. Applications should be forwarded to the Graduate Chair.
